We're accelerating new program development and expanding bachelor's programs that prepare students for the careers that matter most to our region and our students' aspirations.

We're investing in recruiting and developing exceptional faculty who change student trajectories through consistent guidance, mentored research, and individual attention that helps every student persist and succeed.

WHAT'S AT STAKE

If we invest: students learn with programs and experiences aligned to real careers, ready to contribute from day one.

If we don't: fewer program options and limited capacity make it harder for students to launch—and for SMC to keep its promise.
